ACTION OF COUNCIL.

At the annual County Board meeting of last week, the rate of taxation of the City of Rhinelander was raised from forty to forty two and three fourths per cent. At the meeting of the Council Tuesday evening, the Mayor appointed the following members, Chris. Roepcke, Prescott Calhoun and Hans. Hall as committee to consult with the City Atty and take other preliminary steps to contest the action of the County Board. There seems to be a strong feeling in the City that the City rate is out of proportion with that of the County towns.

WOODMEN ELECT OFFICERS.

The annual election of officers of Lake Camp 1749 M. W. A. of this City was held Tuesday evening in the lodge rooms on Stevens Street. The following were elected: E. J. Koepek, Clerk, Thos. Dunn, Venerable Counsel, Chas. Perry, Banker, Mike McDermott, Advisor, F. Fletcher, Watchman, Richard Alexander, Sentry, Joe Hack, Manager for three years, Geo. Jewell, who had been clerk of this camp for a number of years, refused to be a candidate for re-election.

COMMITTED TO ASYLUM.

Richard Kamm, a laborer about 25 years of age, was examined as to his sanity Monday by Drs. Stone and Richards. He was found to be of unsound mind and was committed to the Northern Asylum by County Judge Billings. He was taken to that institution, Tuesday. Kamm had resided here for about two years and worked in the mills.

The last session of the Fifty-Ninth Congress met Monday. Many old members seem to wish to let the session pass without taking up important measures. With President Roosevelt to prod them on, it seems hardly possible to kill the time to March fourth. The dignified Senate, a body caring little for the interests of the people, are now much concerned about the action of the President in discharging the negro troops. Perhaps they think they can keep Mr. Roosevelt from pushing important public questions by interfering with his action in this minor matter.

Washington, D. C. Dec 1.—An illustrated message to congress is the novelty without precedent in the annals of the American republic which President Roosevelt will introduce at the approaching session of congress. Accompanying the president's special message on the Isthmian canal will be large photographs, perhaps half a hundred in number, showing actual conditions in the canal zone as he saw them.

Nothing could be more convincing than this method adopted by the president. In the opinion of his advisers. When the message is read and the pictures viewed in both houses of congress no senator or representative can fail to appreciate the difficulties that are being encountered and in many instances bravely overcome in the gigantic task of canal digging.

CONGRESS TO SEE WORK, "IN REING" When President Roosevelt started out on his Panama trip it was with the determination to see everything possible in the time allotted and to study the situation at first hand, even under the most adverse conditions. These conditions, no matter how he found them, he determined to portray as faithfully as he could before congress and the public generally.

For this purpose a special photographer with an elaborate photographing apparatus was sent to Colon a few days ahead of the president. He arrived there almost simultaneously with Chairman Shonts, under whose personal direction he set about making pictures. Almost everything from Colon to Panama had been photographed before the president's arrival, and then the photographer followed him across the isthmus, photographing everything again as Mr. Roosevelt saw it.

The president's special message on the subject of the canal is expected to be eloquent, but these photographs will be even more so. One large view will show the great reservoir that supplies water to Colon, which Pontney Bigelow declared did not exist. In this photograph the reservoir is full of water to overflowing, and on one edge of it stands the president, Chairman Shonts, Engineer Stevens, and other members of the commission.

PASSING TO CULEBRA—SEE PICTURE. Some people may say Culebra has not been dug out, but the president will say that he found it was, and he will back his statement up with photographs showing the deep excavation. Maybe the work was being done slowly, as some critics declared, but it is no more a joke to say that the dirt fairly flew while the president was there, for the photographer has records proving that it did.

If any of the steam shovels had been idle before President Roosevelt landed, the picture shows all in operation, turning out earth and blasted rock.

Other picture show the progress of the work on the dams and locks, while other pictures show the lakes and small streams. Some show the president's train standing within a stone's throw of the canal itself, and in many of them rain can be seen coming down in torrents, the men at work, and the president wading through mud and slush, thoroughly drenched.

PRESIDENT FERCHED ON A SHOVEL. In one picture he is on a steam shovel, in another he is on a dredge, in one he is asking question of officials of the zone in another he is hearing complaints of the humblest, most ignorant, and lowest paid laborers, among them Jamaican negroes.

All these things and more, too will the pictures show. Photographs were taken of receptions, the great parade in Panama City, and other demonstrations in connection with the president's visit but none of these will be exhibited. The president is not taking this step to exploit his personal likeness before congress, but will show to them pictures of the canal and how the work is being done as he saw it.—Chicago Tribune.

The ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church will hold its annual bazaar next Wednesday and Thursday in the Welsen building on Brown Street.

The new first ward school is at last completed, four months after the time set by the contract, about the same delay as there was in the 5th ward school last year. The contractor for the North Side building had to forfeit about five hundred fifty dollars on his four months delay. The contractor for the fifth ward on the $17,000 building was docked $1000 or about twice this amount and the same delay. The various grades which have been scattered over the City for the past year have been transferred to the new school building in the first ward.

State Capital Notes
Weekly Budget Gathered by Our Special Correspondent at Madison.

Madison.—The Wisconsin railroad commission issued an order reducing rates on pulpwood from points in northern Wisconsin to Neenah and Menasha about 12 per cent. This is one of the most important actions taken by the commission since its creation and is expected to prove of considerable benefit to paper manufacturers and paper consumers. It is probable that corresponding reduction will be made in rates from all pulpwood points to places in the state where wood fiber paper mills are located. The order was issued on petition of the Island Paper company, of Menasha, which complained that the rates on pulpwood from points in northern Wisconsin to Neenah and Menasha were unjustly discriminatory and excessive. The commission decided that it used about 18,000 cords of hemlock pulpwood from northern Wisconsin annually. The commission decided that the rates were excessive, but not discriminatory. The commission specifically orders that the rates on pulpwood between Spencer and Portage to Neenah and Menasha be reduced to 4 1/2 cents per 100 pounds, and between Phillips and Marquette and Neenah and Menasha to 5 1/2 cents. It also orders the Wisconsin Central to cancel its proportional rate on pulpwood as published in its tariff sheet No. D, 1232, and recommends that in substitution therefor the road enter into a joint rate arrangement with its connections at Neenah and Menasha. It is estimated that the reduction in these rates will result in a saving of between $50,000 and $100,000 a year to the paper mills of the state.

Improve Wisconsin Horses.—The most effective method of improving the quality of horses raised in Wisconsin forms the subject of the latest bulletin of the University of Wisconsin agricultural experiment station by Prof. A. S. Alexander, entitled "The Horse Breeding Industry of Wisconsin." The bulletin reviews the effects on horse breeding in Wisconsin of the law which went into effect last January, regulating conditions of breeding and providing for the registration of horses and the issuance of certificates by the department of horse breeding of the state university. Prof. Alexander also points out the changes and additions necessary in the law in order to make its operation more effective. Among the proposed provisions for consideration at the coming session of the legislature are an annual or biennial renewal of license fee; specific authority for the department of horse breeding to refuse licenses for unsound horses; the institution of a plan of expert veterinary inspection of horses used in breeding. As a result of the enactment of the stallion law the department of horse breeding of the state university, in scrutinizing the pedigree certificates, has discovered a number of instances of fraud in matters pertaining to the age and breeding of horses. In a considerable number of cases it was found that changes had been made in the date of birth as stated in the certificate of registry. In each case the change had been made by some previous owner of the animal, and often the present owner had no trace of the previous owner and therefore was not a party to the fraud. The department of horse breeding has also discovered the issuance of fraudulent pedigree certificates by accommodating bogus registry companies which extract money from horse breeders who fail to have the pedigrees of their horses accepted for registry by recognized registry associations.

New Place for Sturdevant.—Attorney General Sturdevant will probably be appointed as federal claim agent by Governor Davidson. The position pays $250 a month and was held by Judge H. B. Constock for two years. Following the resignation of Governor La Follette, Constock resigned to go into newspaper work. It was rumored that Mr. Sturdevant might be called to the office of private secretary of the governor, but an investigation shows that Senator O. G. Munson can hold the position of private secretary and senator at the same time.

More Campaign Expenses.—According to a statement filed in the secretary of state's office, Charles H. Perry, of Milwaukee, spent $257.91 in campaigning for the Republican nomination for congress in the Fourth district. Charles W. Swanson, of Superior, Social Democratic candidate for congress in the Eleventh district, declares that he did not spend anything for campaign expenses.

State Banks Prosperous.—According to a report of State Banking Commissioner Bergh at the close of business on Nov. 12 the 406 state and savings banks of Wisconsin had deposits aggregating $43,316,547, an increase of $3,815,550 over that on Sept. 4, the date of the preceding report. In other words, the deposits of these banks are increasing at the rate of nearly $2,000,000 a month. Total assets increase in resources and liabilities, Sept. 4 to Nov. 12, was $1,727,164.43, and the total net increase $1,725,268.67.

Certifies to Sums Expended.—President A. J. Earlean, of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad company, recently filed a statement in the office of the secretary of state at Madison, declaring that the company has issued all of the $25,000,000 of additional stock voted by the stockholders at a meeting held October 4, 1902, and that the whole of the money received has been spent in constructing new lines, extensions and sidetracks, and buying real estate and equipment.

Record of Wisconsin Antiquities.—The Wisconsin Archeological Society, which for some several years past has been actively engaged in encouraging the preservation and spreading the knowledge of the antiquities, significance and educational value of the antiquities of the state, is now publishing and will soon issue "A Record of Wisconsin Antiquities." This valuable work will be, in fact, a complete directory to the now known Indian burial mounds, linear and other mounds, village, camp and workshop sites, corn hills, garden beds, provision caches, flint and pipestone quarries, lead diggings, spirit stones, pictographs, cemeteries, portages, trails, fords and other associated antiquities in nearly 70 Wisconsin counties. This booklet is designed to prove of interest alike to students of American archeology, to educators and tourists. Its size is such that it may be conveniently carried in the pocket, thus making it a handy field directory. Each item noted is conveniently arranged under the county or city and township in which it occurs, and is accompanied by full references to the published literature. The information collected in this publication represents nearly 60 years of research. It includes not only the wealth of information collected by Increase A. Lapham, Stephen D. Peet, Cyrus Thomas and their associates, but also the great amount of additional data collected through the surface surveys and researches of the members of the Wisconsin society. The edition now in press will be limited to 1,500 copies, the greater number of which will be distributed among members of the society and local educational institutions. The small remaining number of copies may be purchased of the society for $1 each. Inquiries may be addressed to Charles E. Brown, secretary, Milwaukee, Wis. All monies thus obtained will be employed for the extension of its surveys and investigations.

According to the theories of the pessimist it is folly to circulate them.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. For children, who suffer from teething, colic, and all the ailments of infancy. It is the best remedy for all these troubles. It is sold by all druggists.

Enmity of your enemies is less uncertain than the friendship of your friends.

National Pure Food and Drugs Act. The Garfield Remedies meet with the highest commendation of the new Law. Take Garfield Tea for constipation.

Cost of the Taj Mahal. The Taj Mahal, at Agra, would cost ten millions if built to-day. It was begun in 1629, and finished in 1648.

Officers of New York Police. New York City has one captain of sergeant for every 20 members of the police force.

Lesson Others Might Learn. In a railroad train Bishop Brooks of Boston leaned across the aisle and toward an intelligent looking gentleman, and asked: "What were you going to remark?" "I wasn't going to remark anything." "But you looked at me, and seemed about to say something to me." "Yes, I am said to be very deceptive that way. I used to say things and make remarks as soon as I thought them. I have often thought I had something to say, and discovered after I had said that I ought to have kept my mouth shut."

Japan's Empress Popular. It is doubtful if any royal consort is more loved by her people than is the empress of Japan. Educated according to feudal ideas and skilled in all the accomplishments befitting one of her social eminence, her majesty strongly favors the broadness of the new education for women and from her private purse gives large sums toward the maintenance of women's schools and universities. During the war with Russia the empress visited the hospitals many times and every day passed hours making bandages. The effect of these bandages upon the wounded soldiers has been of deep interest to medical and scientific men, for the soldiers honored by them seemed to rally under a peculiar mental influence. All other bandages were destroyed after their first use; those made by the empress were stored and used again for the simple reason of their effect on the recovery of the soldiers.

TEN YEARS OF PAIN. Unable to Do Even Housework Because of Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Margaret Emmerich, of Clinton street, Napoleon, O., says: "For fifteen years I was a great sufferer from kidney troubles. My back pained me terribly. Every turn or move caused sharp shooting pains. My weight was poor, dark spots appeared before me, and I had dizzy spells. For ten years I could not do housework, and for two years did not get out of the house. The kidney secretions were irregular, and doctors were not helping me. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me quick relief, and finally cured me. They saved my life." Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

HIS TROUBLE WAS INTERNAL. Indian Chief Had Peculiar Ideas About Hydrophobia.

Mayor Stoy of Atlantic City was describing the cosmopolitan throngs that visit his famous and gay resort. "Every nationality comes here," he said. "Greeks, Turks, Hindoos, Chinese, Moors—they all come."

"I was talking the other day to one of the physicians of the Pasteur Institute—the hospital, you know, for the prevention and cure of hydrophobia. The Pasteur Institute reminded me of Atlantic City, its visitors seemed to be of such a diversified character."

"The physician told me about an Indian chief who had come to him for treatment last year."

"My name," said the chief, "is War Eagle. Please take me in hand. I fear I am getting hydrophobia."

"Have you been bitten," the physician asked, "by a mad dog?"

"Not exactly bitten," War Eagle answered, "but I have the gravest suspicions about a black poodle that was served to me in a ragout last Friday afternoon."

"The Six Largest Lakes. Six lakes of more than 20,000 square miles in area exist in the world. The Caspian is the largest of these, and Lake Huron the smallest."

"I hear, Mrs. O'Flanagan, that your husband is very strong in his convictions." "Yes, sir; but he's wack in his head."

WHO SHE WAS

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM

And a True Story of How the Vegetable Compound Had Its Birth and How the "Panic of '73" Caused It to be Offered for Public Sale in Drug Stores.

This remarkable woman, whose maiden name was Estlin, was born in Lynn, Mass., February 9th, 1819, coming from a good old Quaker family. For some years she taught school, and became known as a woman of an alert restore the family fortune. They argued that the medicine which was so good for their woman friends and neighbors was equally good for the women of the whole world.

The Pinkhams had no money, and little credit. Their first laboratory was the kitchen, where roots and herbs were steeped on the stove, gradually filling a gross of bottles. Then came the question of selling it for always before they had given it away freely. They hired a job printer to run off some pamphlets setting forth the merits of the medicine, now called Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and these were distributed by the Pinkhams sons in Boston, New York, and Brooklyn.

and investigating mind, an earnest seeker after knowledge, and above all, possessed of a wonderfully sympathetic nature.

The wonderful curative properties of the medicine were, to a great extent, self-advertising, for whoever used it recommended it to others, and the demand gradually increased.

In 1843 she married Isaac Pinkham, a builder and real estate operator, and their early married life was marked by prosperity and happiness. They had four children, three sons and a daughter.

Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of this life. She passed to her reward years ago, but not till she had provided means for continuing her work as effectively as she could have done it herself.

In those good old fashioned days it was common for mothers to make their own home medicines from roots and herbs, nature's own remedies—calling in a physician only in specially urgent cases. By tradition and experience many of them gained a wonderful knowledge of the curative properties of the various roots and herbs.

During her long and eventful experience she was ever methodical in her work and she was always careful to preserve a record of every case that came to her attention. The case of every sick woman who applied to her for advice, and there were thousands—received careful study, and the details, including symptoms, treatment and results were recorded for future reference, and these records, together with hundreds of thousands made since, are available to sick women the world over, and represent a vast collaboration of information regarding the treatment of woman's ills, which for authenticity and accuracy can hardly be equaled in any library in the world.

Mrs. Pinkham took a great interest in the study of roots and herbs, their characteristics and power over disease. She maintained that just as nature so lovingly provides in the harvest fields and orchards vegetable roots of all kinds; so, if we but take the pains to find them, in the roots and herbs of the field there are remedies expressly designed to cure the various ills and weaknesses of the body, and it was her pleasure to search these out, and preserve simple and effective medicines for her own family and friends.

Chief of these was a rare combination of the choicest medicinal roots and herbs found best adapted for the cure of the ills and weaknesses peculiar to the female sex, and Lydia E. Pinkham's friends and neighbors learned that her compound relieved and cured, and it became quite popular among them.

All this so far was done freely, without money and without price, as a labor of love.

But in 1873 the financial crisis struck Lynn. Its length and severity were too much for the large real estate interests of the Pinkham family, as this class of business suffered most from the fearful depression, so when the Centennial year dawned it found their property swept away. Some other source of income had to be found.

At this point Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made known to the world.

The three sons and the daughter, with their mother, combined forces to

Such is the history of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; made from simple roots and herbs; the one great medicine for women's ailments, and the fitting monument to the noble woman whose name it bears.

The Price of a Kiss

By FRANCES RIVERS

(Copyright, 1904, by Joseph H. Dowling.)

The moment that old David Johns cast his eyes upon the Rey, Paul Bolitho coming toward him over the brow of the hill, he determined not to give him a chance of escape.

The young man noted the increased furrows over the old man's strongly bridged nose; the deeper chinkings at the corners of the resigned mouth, now telling of war between will and weakening muscles.

A feeling of half-harmonious concession to his own early affection for the companion, mixed with a sense of his newly attained position of importance as pastor, was betrayed in Paul's "I want you to come and hear me preach."

"Preach! Yes, for sure. We all like to do a bit of preaching, and 'tis not wonderful when one thinks how well duty runs hand in hand with liking; but sometimes the best words of a preacher are those he doesn't say. Harps and golden crowns and such-like things—what's the use of such to me?"

"You have no religion, Davy."

"There's a lot o' religion in good temper."

Paul Bolitho got up from the bench and walked up and down the path, the impetuosity of his youth apparent in every step. Stopping in front of his old friend, his head shot aloft by the involuntary straightening of the spine. "I want to make men honest, women virtuous," he said.

"Mebbe they would be if they weren't interfered with." The smile that played round the old man's mouth, spoke of intimate knowledge of the world.

"Make what rules you can for your fellowmen, but make none for women—they're exceptions," he advised. "Tho' mebbe you don't know yet that you counts 'em o' any vally. Ah!" he chuckled, "you're terrible young if you haven't thought o' woman to be reckoned with; for sartain sure they'll come even into your life. Women with their crinkly hair, their dancin' eyes an' feet, their smiles an' their mischiefs, their altogether stonishing ways, that, ha! ha! good, sort o' paralyse a man."

"But—"

"They be wonderful tryin', too, an' 'zasperatin'; for they'll bear no control."

Davy's voice faltered, the periods of his talk became detached, stopped altogether. Changing the pipe over from one side to the other of his mouth, he smoked in silence for some minutes, whilst he dived into the recesses of his mind.

"You don't remember my Mary—no, I s'pose not—but you can see her every time you look at my gran—no, my great-granddaughter, Sally. I wouldn't let none o' 'em have my Mary's name—the sound of it gives me now, after all these years, a funny feelin' in my heart."

"I've heard my grandfater speak of your wife."

"She was—well, she was just Mary. The close knittin' of man and woman, as comes about when, day in and day out, they're together, is wonderful. There was only one thing for which we ever fell out. She was always lookin' at girls—specially pretty girls—to see if one took notice o' me. The very name of a girl drew her to 'zapperation. You wouldn't remember Lisbeth Richards, neither?"

Before Paul had time to reply, he answered for him: "No, to be sure not."

"Well, she was a girl always up to some delirium, a mischievous, blue-eyed girl. I didn't know then, though I knew afterwards, that people had been talking of her an' me—but women always will gossip; their lungs is as big as bellows, and the better the women are, the worse they talk."

"Well, 'Lisbeth, she come in one day: 'So yer off, Davy?' says she. 'I was startin' with the boats to the North. An' because she looked at me with a tear in her eye, or just because I was young, an' a fool, an' flattered, or because I couldn't help it, or because she wished it, or for some reason or the want of any, I put my arm around her waist and gave her a kiss."

"An' just then, Mary, who I thought was in the next room, she came in. She was all a-tremblin' an' was skeart as I had never seen her before. She seemed not to know what she was doin'—a sob, a cruel, deep sob—it sounded like a cry, strangled in the throat—came from her lips. But it seemed to me Mary was makin' a strange fuss over so smad a matter, though the most violent feelin' in the world is one woman's hatred o' another."

"I started to embrace her."

"Don't you touch me, and your arm just from Lisbeth's waist!"

"She went back a few steps. Seemed to me my heart was bein' tore out o' my breast and the pain o' it was unbearable."

"What made you do it? Why did you act so cruel to me?" she asked.

"I didn't mean no harm; 'twas no more than—than—' I started at her dumb, findin' no words small enough to tell her in. At last: 'Tve known Lisbeth ever since she was a slip o' a child,' I says."

"Do you know all the things folks says about her?" she said. "Do you reckon that if it had been me that had been actin' that way, you would be so hasty to forgive? 'Twould be a narrow heart that couldn't find room for anger."

"Sure you can't be afraid of Lisbeth?"

"What for should I be afraid? It's not Lisbeth that my heart is hard agin'; I reckon it's all one to me what Lisbeth does. 'Tisn't of Lisbeth I think—'tis of you."

"She won't never come between us agin'."

"Between us—no, that she shan't," and Mary laughed.

"I stood an' look'd at her, a feelin' bitter in my heart. 'Tis the way o' man to be shy o' ownin' himself in the wrong."

"I never cared for any other woman same as I do for you, so what do you want to punish me for?"

"I'm no judge o' others," she says, with that obstinate way o' woman as drives men wild.

"I'm goin', Mary. Do you mean to send me away in anger? Be sure what you are about. Kiss me just afore I go," I said.

"And take the taste o' Lisbeth from your lips," she answered.

"Don't you see—David turned in reverence to his listener—that I had to pluck up a spirit after that, so I took her face between my hands—her eyes didn't blinch, she was so hard—as hard—as only a soft woman can be. I caught her to me an', tho' she struggled, I kissed her."

Davy took off his hat in act of reverence. "I thank the Almighty."

"The boats will be off unless I go now, but I'll come back to you, Mary, an' things'll be the same as ever," I asked.

"She sort o' coiled herself together, but said nothin', tho' she followed me to the door. She had a shawl over her head, and her dark hair, blown loose by the wind was tangled about her head and face—she looked like nothing but a child, holding another child—mine—in her arms."

"The boys was callin' me, so I hurried down the path and away to the shore. I listened, listened, and didn't quite know for what. From up along came a cry that sounded like 'Davy! Davy!' 'Twas as though some one were terrible put out. I was most at the shore then, and the others was tellin' me to come, an' I was always slow to see what I should do—now in the upstate, as Mary used to say."

"It was May when we went north, and June we was there, and July we was there, too."

"How I longed to come back!" Davy dropped for a moment his narrative to question his companion. "Have you ever felt homesick? It's like—like—like nothin' else. But a sort o' mother feelin', I guess, somethin' stretches out its arms an' calls to you. I was fair crazy with joy o' life the mornin' we got back; I can't explain; but you, you're young, an' maybe you'll understand."

"I came up that hill—he stretched an indicating hand. "It was early when we got in, so I made my way up here without seein' any o' the boys. The air—I took a fill o' it as I stood at that gate—was crisp yet soft; it tasted cold upon my lips, like a draught of water from our well."

"A curious, holy feeling seemed to rest about the place; the sun thread the mist with strings o' gold, and great grey gulls played over the creeps in waves. I'd brought home all my share of the fish, and was countin' what I could buy for Mary an' the little ones. Ostich feathers! Women love ostich feathers—meringues, and zinc ketles for the bread. I'd thought o' 'em all. But when I got to the door, I was afraid—sudden-like a feeling o' fear gripped me. I was most terrible afraid. My hand grew cold an' clammy, my breath come short, I seemed not to see the way, an' I disremember how I got in."

Davy paused.

Paul stirred to interest, had given, from time to time, by attentive eyes and inclinations of the head, that human punctuation which arrests, and without which a recital becomes but a stringing together of meaningless words. He now asked, anxiously: "Mary—what of Mary?"

Davy rapped the ashes of his long empty pipe, then looked at him whilst the easy tears of cherished grief trickled down his cheeks.

"I was too late ever to see her; but it won't be long now afore I do."

Company Organized with Big Capital to Develop Water Power of High Falls and Johnson Falls, Near Marinette.

Marinette.—There has been formally organized at Oshkosh a corporation which will expend more than $1,000,000 in the next year for the development of the water powers of the Peshtigo river, about 21 miles from here. The company, which is promoted by Frank Greene, of Chicago, C. O. Joslyn, Frank Joslyn, E. S. Joslyn, C. A. Hartley and J. A. Powers, of Oshkosh, closed the deal for the rights to Elmer Grimmer, a real estate dealer of this city, who was acting for E. O. Kersten.

The water powers have been surveyed by a corps of 16 surveyors and complete plans made for the generating of between 30,000 and 40,000 horse power for transmission to this city and Menomonie, Green Bay, Peshtigo and possibly to Oshkosh.

The project has long been under consideration and will now be rushed through so that power can be furnished by next fall.

PIONEERS DIE ON SAME DAY.

Bangor Men Expire Within Few Hours After 50 Years' Residence There.

La Crosse.—After over 50 years of residence in the same village, the oldest settlers of Bangor, John Wheldon and William Price, died on the same day within a few hours of each other. Mr. Price, who was 86 years of age, had been ill for several months, but Mr. Wheldon died suddenly at the age of 91 years. Mr. Wheldon came to La Crosse county 53 years ago and was the first settler in the eastern part of La Crosse county. Less than 12 months later Mr. Price settled within a few miles of the farm of the former and the friendship which began then continued steadfast to the end. Mr. Wheldon was born in Bangor, Wales, and came to this country when a young man. In honor of his home town he named his homestead Bangor, and the original town farm now marks the site of the thriving village of Bangor. Mr. Wheldon was postmaster for many years, served a number of terms as county superintendent, and held various other town offices. He is survived by a widow and eight children. Mr. Price is survived by a widow, one son and six daughters.

All Union Men Not Held.

Racine.—In a supplemental decision handed down by Judge Fowler of Portage in the Schultz case tried in the circuit court, he decided that his former judgment in the matter was not binding on all members of the unions involved in the boycott proceedings. He decided that only such members of the unions who had committed overt acts were to be considered responsible.

Narrow Escape from Death.

Kenosha.—Jay Bailey and John Barrows, two well known farmers of the town of Somers, had a remarkable escape from death when the wagon in which they were riding was struck by a fast express train. The two men were thrown 20 feet into a ditch in a field along the road. Neither of the men suffered any injury.

Invention Promises Well.

Fond du Lac.—A company has been formed to manufacture a new electric battery which, if the promises of the inventor are carried out, will revolutionize the electrical and industrial world. The capital stock is $50,000 and all of it has been subscribed. The factory will be located in Fond du Lac.

Fight at Dance Is Fatal.

Racine.—Edward Plinow, the young man stabbed outside of a dance hall, died at St. Mary's hospital after suffering terrible agony. Joseph Petras and Joseph Hrad are under arrest at Chicago. Leonard Neels and George Saven, arrested after the fight, were fined and released.

Hot Water Plant Blows Up.

Milwaukee.—The grocery store of Ernest Hoffman, Tenth and Locust streets, was blown up by the explosion of the hot water heating plant in the building. Hoffman was seriously injured. The fire department put out several fires caused by the explosion.

Burglars Work at Neenah.

Neenah.—Burglars secured $105 by dynamiting the safe at the Cudahy meat market. The building was partially wrecked.

Against Primary Election Law.

Racine.—The Racine county board of supervisors went on record as being against the primary election law, and will ask the assemblymen and senators to have the law repealed or submit the question of its repeal to the voters of the state.

Boy Gives Life for Friends.

Whitehall.—In attempting to rescue two other boys from the mill pond, Sylvester Bautech fell through the hole in the ice and was drowned. His companions escaped.

Vice Crusade on in Kenosha.

Kenosha.—The civic federation of Kenosha started on a crusade against vice here which has been threatened for some weeks. Six men and one woman were arrested and the district attorney threatens to send half a hundred men and women to state's prison within a few weeks.

Gives $50,000 for School Building.

Chippewa Falls.—Notre Dame parish has received $50,000 from A. R. McDonnell, a well-known Wisconsin lumberman.

In Praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

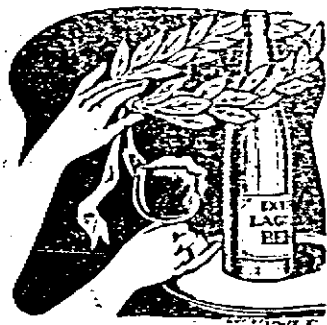

There is no other medicine manufactured that has received so much praise and so many expressions of gratitude as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is effective, and prompt relief follows its use. Grateful parents everywhere do not hesitate to testify to its merits for the benefit of others. It is a certain cure for croup and will prevent the attack if given at the first appearance of the disease. It is especially adapted to children as it is pleasant to take and contains nothing injurious. Mr. E. A. Humphreys, a well known resident and clerk in the store of Mr. L. Lock, of Alice, Cape Colony, South Africa, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to ward off croup and colds in my family. I found it to be very satisfactory and it gives me pleasure to recommend it." For sale by Anderle & Homan.
